-The Secretary of War at Washinghas received a letter from the commanding officer at Fort Dodge, Kansas, stating that a general outbreak of hostilities on the part of the Cheyennes and Arrapahoes is feared in early spring, and that the objective paints of attack will be the frontier settlements of Kansas. Jien. Pope indorses the letter, hoping the Interior Department will at once take measures to satisfy or pacify these Indians whom he says have just grounds for complaint, and adds that if the Indian war does come, as it surely will, the military authorities cannot be held responsible for it.

—A letter writer in Rome says that a letter will has received a letter from the command-

Emanuel in the Pitti palace at Florence on the 12th inst., in honor of General Sheridan, whose departure from Rome I chronicled in my preceding letter. In a conversation I had with General Sheridan here, I inquired of that distinguished officer what impressions he had obtained from his observations of the France-Prussian camgaign, as compared with his own experience of the events of the American war. The General told me that in the first place he saw very well that the Germans were "walking over the track," and secondly that he did not find any important advances upon the tactices already adopted by Homeopathic Apothecary. American strategists. But with regard to the national defence of France, General Sheridan considered that the want of good cavalry had prevented the French commanders from repulsing their invaders, and he estimated that a flying column like his own, vigorously directed, would have cut the Germans all to pieces and liberated Paris long be-

Dr. Helmbold thinks the Little Church Round the Corner should be made the grandest church in the city, and offers to give $5,000, toward this purpose. This is generous in Dr. Helmbold; but if the Little Church should be taken down and a grand edifice erected in its place would it still be the Little Church Bound the Corner? Would it still retain the distinction it has now acquired of being grand in its recognition of man's common grand in its recognition of man's common spiritual destiny, not withstanding that in the estimation of those who view things only according to outward appearances, it is rething but a little church? We dare say that, however much it might be enlarged it would still retain this distinction so long as they would still retain this distinction so long as the Christian Or. A somewhat eccentric lawyer, being 1871. engaged in defending a hard case, and not being altogether pleased with the rulings of the presiding judge, remarked that he believed the whole court could by bought with a peck of beans. The judge, of course, took this remark in high dudgeon, and ordered the lawyer to sit down and demanded of him and to sit down, and demanded of him an apology for this contempt of court threatening him with commitment for the offense if he did not apol gize. The lawyer, after a little reflection, remarked that he had said he believed the court, could be bought with a peck of beans; that he said it without reflection, and wished to take it back. "But," said be, "if I had put it at half a bushel, I would never have taken it back in the world."

Fowls,-A writer in one of our agri cultural exchanges says:

There is trouble in getting over one hundred eggs from any breed of fowls hundred eggs from any breed of fowls "every year." Our experience of forty years, with twenty different breeds; and the experience of the whole world is, that no breed of fowls will lay, taking a series of years together, over about 100 eggs each annually. If one keeps twenty bens, and gets 2,000 eggs during the year, he does well. Frequently a slugle hen will lay more than 100 eggs in a year; but the average of a flock is as we of St. Louis, for year; but the average of a flock is as we

[Communicated.] "TIME WILL TELL."

BY MRS. C. J. WINKLER. By a window, in the twilight, Sat a dark-eyed, handrome man; But a faint rustles of the leaves Broke the summer evening's calm.

On the sofa close beaide him Leaued his gentle, girlish bride; Wishing with woman's love to linger Ever near her husband's side.

Her eyes were closed, while happy dreams Were noffly floating thro' her mind, Building airy eastles—thinking Of her husband, so good and kind.

But he thought her fast asleep, As he gently pressed a kiss On the rosy lips half parted, That he knew were only his.

"Sleeping, my love?" he softly murmered,
"My poor little weary bird;
Rest your head upon my bossom;"
Tender were the tones she heard.

"I will be kind to her," he said,
"She has left her loved home—
Father, mother, brothers, sisters—
With me, a stranger, far to roam."

Such a depth of tenderness In his voice, such yearning love, It thrilled her heart like heavenly music Waffed from the choir above.

Then she felt she could not doubt That his heart was all her own, That she never should regret Leaving her childhood's happy home.

Yeal abe felt that she could trust him In this life, come weal or woe, As he carnestly repeated, 'I will be very kind to you.'' Will be do as he has promised? Reader, do you think be will? Men are so likely to forget, And—well, time alone can tell!

At a recent examination of one of the schools in Washington, the question was put to a class of small boys: "Why is Connecticut River so called?" when a bright little fellow put up his hand. "Do you know, James?" "Yes, maram; because it connects Vernout and New Hampshire, and cuts through Massachusett!" was the triumphant reply.

A sharp student was called up by the worthy professor of a celebrated college and asked the question: "Can a man see without eyes?" "Yes, sire, was the prompt answer. "How, sir," cried the amazed professor, "can a man see without eyes? Pray sir, how do you make that out?" "He can see with one, sir," replied the ready-witted youth; and the whole class shouted with delight at the triumph over metaphysics.
